1. FROM THE CEO'S DESK: DAY ONE

273 behind you. 92 ahead.

By the time you wake up this morning, you have already lived 273 days of this year.

Sit with that for a second.

Two hundred and seventy-three mornings of finding your keys, of bills that came on schedule whether the month was kind or not, a phone call you didn't want and even a win you never told anyone about because you were afraid to jinx it. Some of those days you would give anything to have back, while some you would never live again for any price.

Not one certificate was given to you for making it through them but here's the strange part. When October arrives, we only ever count what's left; Ninety-two days because nobody stops to count what's already been carried.

October's name means "eight," yet it's the tenth month. This is because the early Roman year began in March, ran ten months, and left about sixty winter days that no month claimed. Two months were added later, and once the year's start moved to January, October slid down two places but the name never caught up.

We do the same thing with the end of the year, we treat the last quarter as leftover time, something to wait out until January. The days are still there but we just don't count them.

Land doesn't do any of this.

The creek behind a piece of property in North Texas doesn't know it's October because the cedar doesn't check a calendar, the ground has no fiscal year, no Q4, no "let's circle back in the new year." Land runs on a clock that our whole calendar is a rounding error.

Which means the 92 days aren't the land's, they are ours. We are the only ones counting, and that makes the counting the one thing we control.

That's what this issue is about, a look at the last 92 days of the year, counted on purpose. Some of these days will go fast. Some will go slow. All 92 count.

Today is Day One.

Count it.

With warmth,

Akingbade Akinfenwa

2. THE ROAD-IN

Drive Highway 82 from Bonham east toward Honey Grove and you pass a lake that didn't exist four years ago. Turn south toward Leonard and Wolfe City and you are on ground that has quietly become some of the fastest-growing land in North Texas. Head north on 121 toward Gainesville and I-35 and you are driving through what is now one of the busiest development corridors in the state. Southeast, toward Roxton, the road runs into Paris, the seat of Lamar County and the anchor of that whole corner of the map.

“

None of these towns grew this way on its own, they are all riding the same wave: North Texas is pushing outward from Dallas-Fort Worth, looking for room. Bonham, Gainesville, Wolfe City, Honey Grove, Leonard, Dodd City, Roxton, and Paris are all catching a piece of it.

WHAT'S GOING UP RIGHT NOW

County / Town	Project	Type	Scale	Status
Fannin (Bonham)	Asher Oaks	Housing	78 lots, D.R. Horton	Closing now, complete 2028
Fannin (Bonham)	Powder Creek Ranch	Housing	3,000 homes planned, 400 acres	Phase 1 breaking ground late 2026
Fannin (Dodd city/near Honey Grove corridor)	Bois d'Arc Lake	Reservoir / recreation	First major Texas reservoir in 30+ years; boating, fishing	Open since 2022
Fannin (near Ladonia/Leonard corridor)	Lake Ralph Hall	Reservoir / recreation	Trails, boat ramp, fossil park planned	Filling now; opens for recreation 2029-31
Cooke (Gainesville)	Liberty Pointe, Rock Creek, NorthPark	Housing	1,600+ homes/units combined	Delivering through 2026
Cooke (Gainesville)	Camp Howze Rail Park	Industrial	Up to 7M sq ft	Broke ground June 2026
Cooke (Gainesville)	I-35 expansion, Phase 3	Road infrastructure	TxDOT corridor widening	Starts May 2026
Hunt (Wolfe City)	203-acre mixed-use tract	Land / future development	Commercial, residential, ag potential	Listed, under construction
Lamar (Paris, near Roxton corridor)	TxDOT Paris District HQ/housing development	Infrastructure	120,000 sq ft, 12 buildings, 160 jobs/41 homes, $10M	Opened Aug 2025/Phase 1 complete early 2026

Two new lakes now sit inside Fannin County alone, the first major reservoirs built in Texas in three decades in Dodd City, already open for boating and fishing; the other is filling as this issue goes to print. Neither existed when most people last looked at a map of this area. Gainesville is absorbing the same pressure from the other direction, an I-35 corridor with a rail park sized for 7 million square feet and a highway expansion already under construction. Paris is doing it quietly through infrastructure: a new $120 million TxDOT headquarters, an $80 million water system rebuild, and a 41-home development already in its first phase.

WHAT THIS MEANS FOR THE 92 DAYS

A lake, a rail park, and a wastewater system don't open on New Year's Day just because the calendar resets, they open on the schedule they are already on, and that schedule doesn't pause for anyone still deciding. Whoever is holding land near any of these projects when they cross their next milestone is standing somewhere that was worth less before the ground broke.

3. THE HARVEST

What a year of holding land actually produced isn't measured in bushels, it is measured in equity. For most of the year, land looks like it's doing nothing, you drive past in March and it's brown. In July it's the same stretch of ground with heat rising off it. If you own a piece, you start to wonder quietly whether you are the only one who sees anything there. Someone asks how the land is doing, and the honest answer is "sitting there."

Then October comes, and the land answers.

Not with words, with appraisal notices, Zillow estimates climbing or even conversations at the coffee shop in Bonham or Gainesville where someone mentions what their neighbor just sold for per acre and whatever you paid three years ago or the market allowed during the slowdown, all compounds at once.

Texas rural land prices rose 6.02% year-over-year in the first quarter of 2026. The five-year annualized growth rate now sits at 9.73%, meaning land bought in 2021 has doubled in value for many owners.

In North Texas specifically, the story runs deeper. Cooke County (Gainesville), Fannin County (Honeygrove, Bonham, Leonard, Dodd City), and Hunt County (Wolfe City), Roughton sit in one of the fastest-appreciating corridors in the state. Pastureland and ranchland values in this region continue appreciating at 2–5% annually, even as some markets cool.

Here is what one piece of ground actually produces in a year when you are measuring return on investment:

- » Equity growth: A 10-acre parcel bought at $12,500/acre in 2023 now carries roughly $75,200–$125,500/acre in market value.
- » Compounding effect: At an annual appreciation, that same parcel gains about $12,500 in year one, $13,750 in year two, and $15,125 in year three with each year's growth building on the previous year's value.
- » Inflation hedge: While consumer prices fluctuate, land values in North Texas have posted four consecutive quarters of accelerating growth through 2025 and into 2026.
- » Optionality: Whether you hold for recreation, lease for grazing, or wait for development pressure from DFW expansion, the asset works for you in multiple ways.

This isn't a boom that peaks and collapses. It's steady, compounding appreciation driven by population growth, limited supply, and the simple fact that Texas isn't making more land.

Here is what most people miss; October is where this harvest ends, but a smart land investor does not treat it as the end of anything. The people who know land best are already positioning for the next 3–5 years. Harvest tells you what the last year was worth but planting tells you what you believe about the next one and both happen in October.

DAY ONE IS BEHIND YOU.

If you were planting today, what would you want to see standing in the field next fall?

6. YOU STILL HAVE TIME. BUT YOU DON'T HAVE ALL YEAR.

Somewhere in January, you probably made a promise to yourself.

Maybe it was to invest more wisely.....

To stop watching from the sidelines....

To finally buy land....

To build something your family could one day call theirs.

Then life happened.

January became February.....

February became March.....

And somehow, here we are.

Day 92.

Maybe you still haven't bought the land.

Not because you don't want to.

Not because the opportunity disappeared.

Maybe you simply kept waiting for the right time.

More money. More certainty. More information. A better month.

But here is the uncomfortable truth:

Waiting is also a decision.

And while you were waiting, the calendar kept moving.

Land moved too.

Areas changed. Roads expanded. Businesses arrived. Communities grew. Parcels were purchased. Opportunities that once sat quietly on a map became someone else's address.

Fannin County, home to Bonham, Leonard, Dodd City and Honey Grove, grew 9.6% from 2020 to 2025. Cooke County, home to Gainesville, grew 6.7%, while Lamar County, where Roxton sits, reached an estimated 51,503 people in 2025. That growth is accompanied by housing, businesses, building activity and economic movement.

These aren't predictions about what might happen.

They are signs that these communities are already changing.

And sometimes, the land you are looking at today is sitting inside a story that is already being written.

You don't have to regret what you didn't do earlier this year.

But you should ask yourself:

What happens if I keep waiting?

Another January will eventually arrive.

And you may find yourself making the same promise again:

"This year, I'm finally going to buy land."

Or you could make the last stretch of this year mean something different.

Not by rushing blindly.....

Not by buying just anything.....

Not by chasing a deal because someone told you it was urgent.....

But by starting.

Learn.

Ask questions.

Understand the numbers.

Explore the locations.

And when the right piece comes along, be ready to move.

Because sometimes the biggest difference between “I was thinking about buying land” and “I own land” is simply the decision to begin.

You still have time to make this year count.

The question isn't whether you should have started in January.

The question is: what will you do with the days you still have?

Your future self may not remember the day you first looked at a piece of land.

But they may live on it.

Your next piece of land could begin with one simple decision!
