1. FROM THE CEO'S DESK: "WHY I SAID DODD CITY"

After Roxton, I could not pick a dot on a map……

Everyone figured the hard part was over, it wasn't. The hard part was one question that followed me from room to room: Where do we go next, and are we sure?

So I did the unglamorous work, for months I researched, late nights with cold coffee and a screen full of places that looked perfect on paper but felt wrong in my gut. I would close the laptop thinking I was close, then open it the next morning with the same fear: what if we chose wrong? Because this isn't just a purchase, families trust us with their future and every project recommendation carries someone's hope, retirement and legacy.

Then Dodd City kept showing up: in the data, statistics and a lake that arrived where nobody had built one in over thirty years. But no spreadsheet could tell me what I really needed to know: what does it feel like to stand there?

So we drove out with no plan, just boots, a notepad and my own eyes. I half expected to talk myself out of it one more time. Instead, it clicked and for the first time in months, the fear went quiet, and that was when we knew. If you have ever made a big decision with your whole chest, you know exactly what I mean.

So when you ask, "Why Dodd City?"

Here is my answer: A town beside a 16,641-acre lake, the first new major reservoir in Texas in nearly 30 years, built to meet the water needs of a region of 1.8 million people through 2040 is a goldmine opportunity that is rare to come by

I went to see it for myself, and I couldn't look away. Come see it with me.

With warmth,

Akingbade Akinfenwa
Founder & CEO, Landzille

2. THE ORIGINS

FIFTEEN DOLLARS AND A GOOD EYE

Most towns begin with a plan, Dodd City began with a small debt and a good eye.

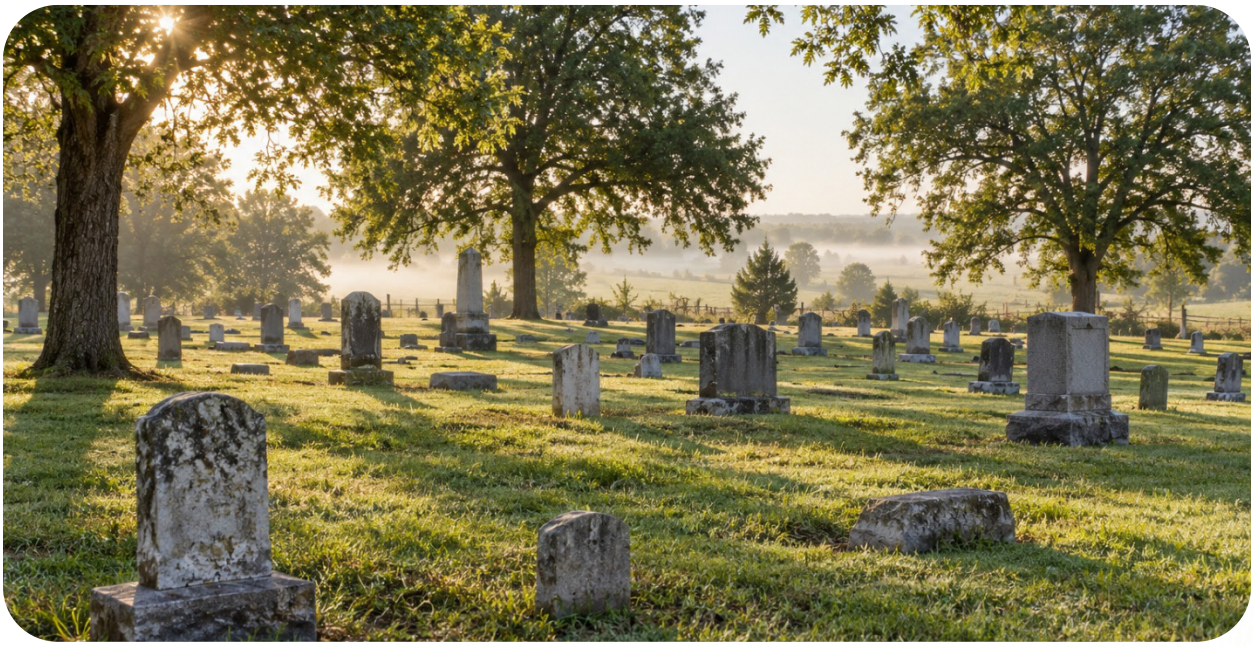

1839

Edmund Hall Dodd rode into the Republic of Texas from Kentucky with no town to arrive at. By 1840, he was borrowing fifteen dollars. A few months later, he began buying land along Bullards Creek. Then he made the choice that mattered, he built a log cabin on a hill above a ravine, directly on the Chihuahua Trail, a route connecting the eastern and western parts of the Republic. It was not a random spot, it was a crossroads and he seemed to understand that before anyone called it one.

1842

A family buried one of its own on the hill, and the land became more than property, It became home.The cemetery Dodd donated is still there.

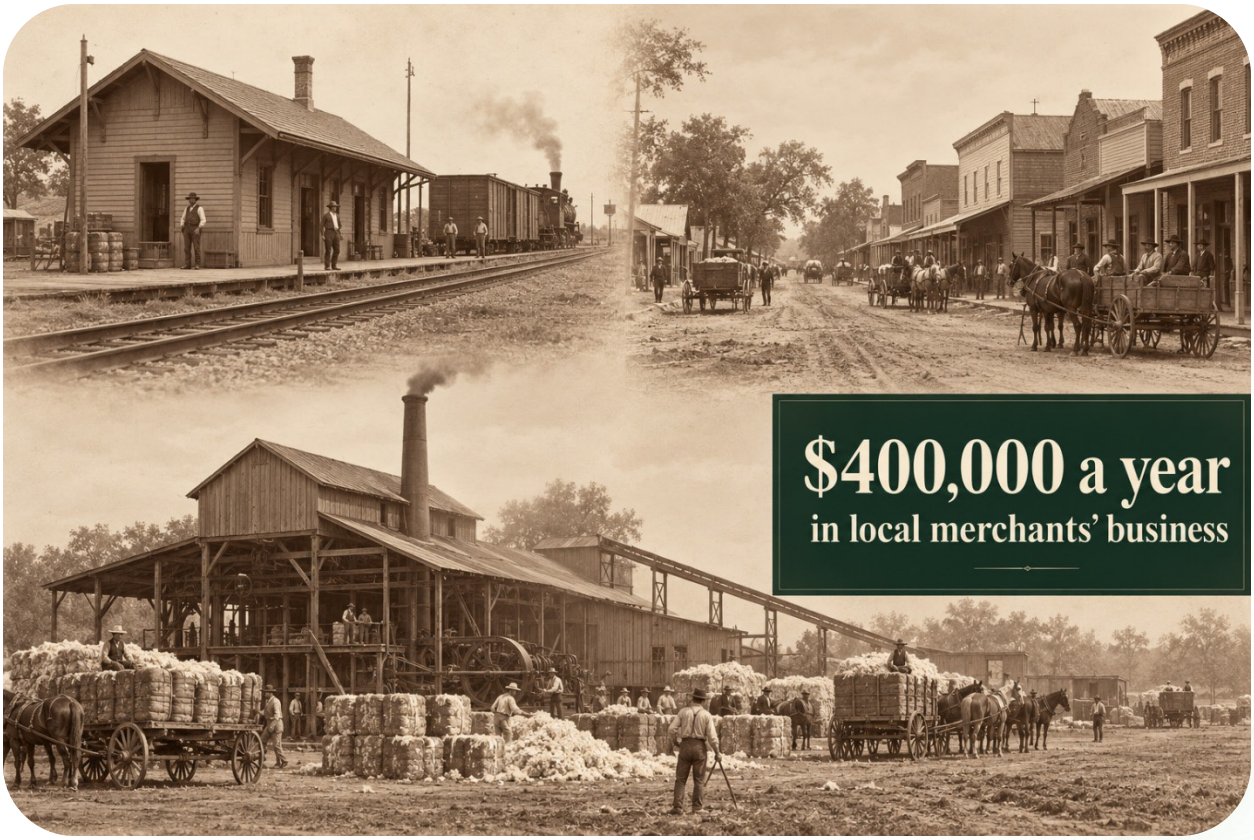

1845 – 1866

The Dodd home grew, and so did its purpose. It served as a post office, then as a stagecoach inn, where weary travelers rested and ox-drawn freight wagons set out for Jefferson. Long before there was a town, there were footsteps.

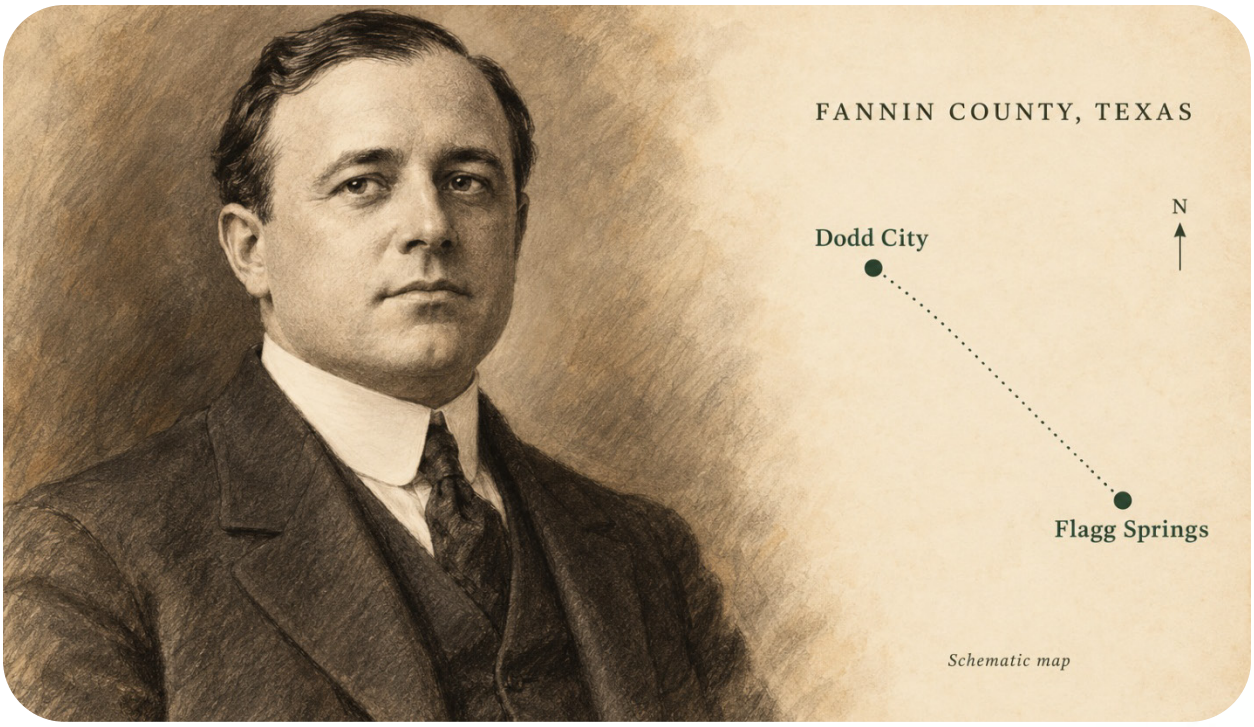

1873

The Texas and Pacific Railroad reached the area, stopping at Quincy, about a mile from Dodd, and the community that had gone nameless for decades grew into the name it carries today. What followed showed what happens when infrastructure meets good ground. By 1885, the town was shipping thousands of bales of cotton and hundreds of railcars of grain, and its merchants were doing around $400,000 a year in business. By 1890, about 500 residents lived here, with grocers, drug stores, mills, gins, and a hotel.

1887

A young boy named Sam arrived in Texas with his family and spent their first few days at the home of his mother's brother, Monroe Waller, in Dodd City before they moved on to Flagg Springs. He grew up to lead the U.S. House of Representatives as Speaker Sam Rayburn.

NOW

Look at Dodd City's story and one pattern stands out. Every chapter of growth began when something big arrived: a trail, a stagecoach line, a railroad. And now, a lake of 16,641 acres, the first new major reservoir in Texas in nearly 30 years.

3. THE SHORELINE

Some places get a lake. This one got a turning point.

Q "How big is this lake, really?

A Big enough that the first time you see it, you will stop talking. Bois d'Arc Lake covers 16,641 acres, about 26 square miles, held back by a two-mile dam. It is the first new major reservoir Texas has built in about 30 years. It opened to the public in spring 2024 and there are three public access areas with a total of seven boat launch ramps, plus picnic areas and restrooms.

Q "Why was it built? and why should Doddy city care?"

A The lake was built for water. The district says it will meet the needs of a growing region of 1.8 million people until 2040. But a lake like this never stays in its lane because Boaters and Anglers came, roads and bridges followed the water, and so did the questions every growing place has to answer: where do we launch, where do we eat, where do we stay?

Q "Okay, but what does a lake actually do to the land around it?"

A It changes what's reachable, visible and who stops by. The district's commissioned studies project that construction alone added around $500 million to Fannin County's economy, with recreation adding about $166 million a year, they also show how much weight a single body of water can carry. For an investor, that matters because infrastructure does not just improve an area, it expands what nearby land can support, from recreation and tourism to long-term demand. At LANDZILLE, we help you position yourself where that growth is heading, so your land is not only a purchase today, but a foundation for tomorrow.

Q: “So where should I actually go?”

A

1. The Dodd City Cemetery- the oldest burials here date to 1842 and this is where the story began.
2. Main Street, Dodd City - Walk the old depot-era route and picture the cotton wagons.
3. The FM 897 Bridge- about 1.3 miles long and the best way to feel the size of the lake.
4. The public boat ramps - the FM 897 ramp has a Dodd City address, so you are closer to town than you think.
5. Fort Inglish Village, Bonham - a replica stockade with 1830s cabins and a window into the area’s earliest settlers.
6. Sam Rayburn Library and Museum - built 1955 to 1957, his family spent their first few days in Texas in Dodd City in 1887.

Q “What’s coming next?”

A In late August 2026, the district’s board authorized a lease for the lake’s first public marina, planned north of the FM 897 bridge. The first phase calls for at least 200 boat slips, and the operator brings experience from Grapevine and Texoma. If construction goes to plan, it should open between the end of 2028 and early 2029, with fuel, a boat ramp, restaurants, and shops to follow.

4. THE LANDING

COLLIN
Fannin, sit down I need to tell you something.

FANNIN
Go ahead.

COLLIN
I took in 64,703 new residents last year.

FANNIN
That's nearly twice everyone who lives in my county.

COLLIN
And the region around me is now almost nine million people, with the water district expecting its service area to double by 2050.

FANNIN
Sounds crowded.

COLLIN
I'm running out of room.

FANNIN
Funny, I just got a lake.

COLLIN
...A lake??

FANNIN
Sixteen thousand, six hundred forty-one acres, a marina on the way and up the road in Sherman, a $40 billion chip campus whose first fab is already in production.

COLLIN
Where do I sign up?

FANNIN
You don't, you pack.

THE NORTH

STAGE 1: PRESSURE.

A metroplex of nearly nine million is looking for room, and Collin County alone added more than 64,700 neighbors in a single year. That pressure doesn't switch off. It moves.

STAGE 2: LIFT.

A 16,641-acre lake opened where nobody had built one in about 30 years. A marina with at least 200 slips has been approved, and it's expected to open between the end of 2028 and early 2029. The lake's own boat ramp carries a Dodd City address.

STAGE 3: IGNITION.

Thirty minutes up the road, Sherman is becoming one of the most closely watched chip-making hubs in the country. TI's first fab is in production, and the campus is planned to support as many as 3,000 direct jobs, plus thousands more in support industries. Those workers need homes, weekends, and water.

STAGE 4: LANDING.

THE LAKESIDE PROJECT, DODD CITY, TEXAS (ARRIVAL)

- 16,641 acres of water.
- A shoreline band that isn't for sale.
- A map that is about to get crowded.
- The part no one can manufacture

Texas had not opened a major new reservoir in about 30 years, then Bois d'Arc Lake opened: a $1.6 billion lake in Fannin County. The North Texas Municipal Water District owns the shoreline band around it.

So the room closest to this water was settled before anyone reading this arrived. You cannot build a lake nor can you print more land within minutes of this one. A marina can be copied, and so can a road, a rooftop or a headline. This part can't.

NOW WATCH THE ARITHMETIC

- 64,703- That's how many residents Collin County, the next county over, added last year.
- 203,786 - That's the whole region's gain, roughly 558 people a day. North Texas is 47,410 people away from 9 million.
- +10.1% - That's Fannin County's growth since 2020.
- 200+ - That's the boat slips in the first public marina, approved in August.
- December 2026 - That's when Texas Instruments began production in Sherman, on a site planned for up to $40 billion.
- 2 lakes - Fannin County now has a second reservoir, Lake Ralph Hall, 7,600 acres and filling.

Every one of those numbers ends in the same question: where do these people go next? Most of them will find the lake on a map. They will zoom in and see a shoreline already spoken for, and land nearby that already has a name on it.

You can already be standing beside it.

We handle the title, match you with the right lender and our farmer leasing program can put the acres to work while you plan. The earlier you indicate interest, the more of the map you get to choose from. When these acres are claimed, the curtain is drawn.
